This obscure museum, dedicated to artifacts and dioramas of the early days of the circus in America, is only open on Thursday afternoons and some Sundays, but well worth researching and planning a visit here. Located on the third floor of the old Elephant Hotel building in Somers, the place has served as the township offices since the 1920's. Besides some very interesting and fun information about how the circus travelled from town to town, this is just a beautiful old building to visit.
