Apple Vs Samsung Patent Case

35 U.S.C. § 289. Apple Inc. v. Samsung Electronic Co., Ltd. was the first of a series of ongoing lawsuits between Apple Inc. and Samsung Electronics regarding the design of smartphones and tablet computers; between them, the companies made more than half of smartphones sold worldwide as of July 2012. In the spring of 2011, Apple began litigating against Samsung in patent infringement suits, while Apple and Motorola Mobility were already engaged in a patent war on several fronts.

In a long-running smartphone case that made headlines when it reached the Supreme Court in 2016, a California jury decided last week that Samsung owes Apple $533 million for infringing three design patents, while awarding only $5 million for infringing two of Apple's utility patents. The verdict hinges on a key distinction between design patents and utility patents: owners of design patents can recover the infringer's total profits for infringement.

$533 Million Apple v. Samsung Verdict Highlights ...

In April 2011, Apple sued Samsung for infringement of design and utility patents, trademarks, and trade dress Apple alleged that certain Samsung products copied Apple's protected product designs and infringe their intellectual property. Namely, Apple thought that Samsung's products mimicked Apple's iPhone's black rectangular front face, round corners, bezel (the black rim surrounding the screen), and sixteen-icon grid.

Yes. The jury has ruled that Samsung willfully infringed a number of Apple patents (more on that in a minute) in creating a number of devices (more coming up on that, too) and has been ordered to pay Apple $1.05 billion in damages. Apple, which Samsung countered for $422 million, will not have to pay anything to Samsung.
