Coke took on the persona of a citizen during the war and stated repeatedly that it was enlisting its sugar for the public good. Despite being the number one brand in the world, coke was always a net consumer not a net producer since it outsourced all its production - way before the word 'outsourced' attained its current popularity.

Founded in 1866 by a "cash-strapped morphine addict operating out of a small pharmaceutical shop," Coca-Cola didn't have the most auspicious beginnings. However, as historian Elmore shows in this detailed profile, the company's success can be traced to an ingenious strategy: supply only the syrup and let suppliers and franchises bear the costs of bottling and distribution, while utilizing the public water supply.
